What are Cookies?

Cookies are small text files that are placed on your device (computer, smartphone, tablet) when you visit a website. They are widely used to make websites work more efficiently and to provide information to the website owners.

Types of Cookies We Use

Essential Cookies: These cookies are necessary for the website to function properly. They enable you to navigate the site and use its features. Without these cookies, services you have requested, such as accessing secure areas of the website, cannot be provided.

Analytical/Performance Cookies: These cookies allow us to recognize and count the number of visitors and to see how visitors navigate our website when they are using it. This helps us to understand visitor engagement with our service. Analytical cookies also aid in improving the way our website works by ensuring that users easily find what they are looking for through the generation of content and the building of better features.

Functionality Cookies: These cookies are used to allow you access to features that are fundamental to a service. Things considered fundamental to a service include site preferences (for example your language settings or region), information relating to your session that allows us to recognize you when you return (form data that you filled in previously), and product optimizations that help maintain and improve our service for you.

Advertisement Cookies: These cookies record your visit to our website, the pages you have visited, and the links you have followed. We will use this information to make our website more relevant to your interests. We may also share this information with third parties for this purpose.
